This three day training will address issues related to the apprehension of international fugitives. Interactive discussions related to the obstacles, solutions and requirements to capture and return fugitives will take place. As always, communication, co-operation and networking between global law enforcement agencies are the main goals emphasized during this symposium.

This exchange of knowledge will better prepare investigators to track and capture fugitives across international borders. Fugitives have proven to be desperate criminals with the sole ambition of evading justice. This training offers another opportunity to exchange ideas and information in an attempt to make the fugitive's goal of avoiding capture much more difficult.
